THREE NATIVES OF PIKE

By DAN DE QUILLE.

"At this moment the whole of the column of tarrapin smelt the water and stampeded. The king sat off on a gallop for the river and all three followed, kickin up a great cloud of dust. I stood up and pulled on the halter of my big turtle, but couldn't turn him an inch. At last, sevin he was goin straight into the river, I leaped from his back. I was jist in time, for at the next jump he went over the bank into ten feet of water. The whole column of tarrapin followed, tumblin off the bank into the river in a solid sheet with a roar like a big millrhun.

"I could only stand back, look on and tear my hair, for I seed that as fast as the tarrapin struck the water they went to the bottom. Twixt to their heavy iron shoes they couldn't swim a lick.

"I danced about, swung my hat and shouted, tryin to head off and save a few acres of the tarrapin, but to git in front of 'em would have been as bad as sittin before a herd of buffalo. So I was obliged to see 'em all leap over the bank.

"I was as good as ruined, but I did have one laugh surprised out of me. That was when the rear of the column came up and I see the little nig stretched on his blanket tossed to and fro as by the waves of the sea. Over he went into the river and down to the bottom under a shower of tarrapin.

"The last tarrapin stopped on the bank instead of jumpin into the water. Says I to myself, 'I'll jist ketch you for luck.' I stooped to pick him up when out came a pair of wings and he sailed away across the river. If I hadn't seen this infernal flyin tarrapin before I'd have fainted and tumbled into the river.

"I watched the devilish thing and seed it hind near the opposite bank with a big splash. At the same spot and in an instant up to the surface comes the king of tarrapins, with the little darky on his back. The big turtle blowed a cloud of spray into the air like a spouting whale, and when it cleared away I seed the ole hoodoo doctor, an ole woman and my little nig leave the edge of the water and walk off into a little grove of willer trees.

"I seed then how I'd been hoodooed and ruined, for I'd jist almost my last cent into the venture. As I stood in mentin on the bank a man on hossback come up and asked what was the matter. He was a man from the foundry and one of the blacksmiths that had helped shoe my tarrapins.

"I told the man that I'd lost my whole four sections of tarrapin; that bein wild with thirst they had stampeded, jumped into the river and gone to the bottom, where they would stay on account of the iron on their feet. I didn't say a word about any hoodoo.

"The man asked what I'd take for my whole drove of tarrapin as they lay at the bottom of the river. I asked what he could do with 'em. He said: 'Iron is worth a big price out here. I might dredge the river and git the shoes.'

"'What'll you give?' says I.

"'Enough to take you to California,' says the feller.

"'It's a whack,' says I, and as soon as I had the money in my pocket I cut stick, been afeared the hoodoo feller would come back out. So on I came to this neck o' woods, and here I am yet and poor as Job's turkey.

"'Do you ever hear how the man came out who bought your tarrapin drive?' asked a man of our party known as Colorado Joe.

"'Never a word,' said the Pike.

"'Well,' said Joe, 'I can afford to treat on that trade.

"'Are you the man I sold out to?'

"'The very man.'

"'I swar!' cried the Pike; 'I thought I'd seed you before. Let me see you put up and walk. Jist so—jist so! You're the man that got his right kneecap split by a kick from my big bell turtle.'

"'There you see the scar,' said Joe, baring his right leg.

"'Waal, I swar!' cried the Pike. 'Did you recover much iron?'

"'About all the iron and tarrapins also.'

"'The devil! The tarrapin too? Why how could you git the tarrapin when they were auld in the bottom of water?' and the Pike began to look wild.

"'No trick at all,' said Joe. 'I bought all the horseshoe magnets in Denver, stuck 'em onto the ends of poles and set a whole army of men and boys to fishing up the tarrapins. At every prod they'd bring up a tarrapin, and sevin times two or three, their iron shoes sticking fast to the magnets.'

"'Not alive, was they?' asked the Pike.

"'Yep, all alive and kickin,' said Joe.

"'Just nicely refreshed.'

"'See my dam luck!' cried the Pike, and he seemed ready to git mad.

"'As soon as I'd git out about ten acres of 'em,' continued Joe, 'and my blacksmiths had got the shoes off 'em, I sent 'em in a drove to a big swamp down the river. Out of the four sections of tarrapins I only lost about nine acres. For ten years I had the biggest tarrapin ranch in America.'

"'One thing more,' said the Pike. 'Did you never see anything of my big bell turtle what kicked your kneepan open?'

"'Yep; I fixed him?'

"'What?'

"'Well, one day a man came riding to my house yelling: 'Joe, Joe! Joe, your tarrapins is all mars hilo away from your ranch. Go an head 'em off or you'll lose every mother's son of 'em!'

"'I mounted my horse and struck out. A column of tarrapins five miles long was moving across the plain, the big bell turtle at the head steering straight back toward Missouri.

"'I lassoed the old devil, but nothing could stop or turn him. He was as strong as a rhinoceros. He dragged me and my horse along as if we were mere toys. I says to myself, 'This is no human turtle,' and leaving my lasso on the old fellow's neck I went back home.'

"'You give in to him—you let him go?' cried the Pike.

"'Nosp,' said Joe; 'I went home, molded some silver bullets, loaded my revolver with 'em and came back.

"'The column of tarrapin was then at least ten miles long and moving over the plain like a monster tapeworm. I commanded the big turtle to halt. He went on. Dismounting, I said, 'Stop and turn back or I'll shoot.' On he went. I stuck the pistol on his neck, just at the edge of his shell, and fired.

"'At the crack of the pistol there fell at my feet an old white headed nigger and a streamed blood spouted out of his neck as big as a hoshundle. He gave an awful hollow and sat up and rolled his eyes at me.

"'Up comes a tarrapin and makes a dive for the hell that was on the old fellow's neck. It was a big tarrapin and was getting bigger every second—expanding in every way.

"'Alm' cries I, and I sent a silver bullet into the thing, when down tumbles a little nigger boy.

"'Next minute something bonshed me in the rear that felt like a leather apron, and down drops a flying tarrapin and grabs at the silver bullet. I gaps like one with a silver bullet, and before me lies an old nigger woman all n-kicking and a-squalling.

"'In three minutes all three were dead, and I then took the silver bell and cellar off the old man's neck. I started back toward home a-tinocing the bell and the whole band of tarrapins turned about and marched after me. From that hour I was the 'king of the tarrapins.' I could lead 'em anywhere, though they'd never leave the swamp until they heard the music of that silver bell.'

"'Stranger,' shake hands!' cried the Pike. 'I hope you made half a million out n them tarrapin, and I don't begrudge it to you. In return for your 'Old you've much paid me for all my troubles and losses. This is the happiest day of my life. Back and that never would believe in any tarrapin drive, but now they've got to back water—now the whole thing is proved Gospel truth!'

After a parting round of redeye the three Pikes took leave of me. They marched Indian file into the tules skirting the northern end of the lake. They turned into a trail leading to right and left, as a farmer waves aside the stalks when he passes through a field of growing grain. They made a bee line for the marching settlement lying to the westward of the lake along the timbered foothills of the Sierras.

Our chief commissary looked after the retreating Pikes and said, "Three as queer and well matched cattle as I ever saw, and as capable drinkers!"

"Three rolicking, jolly fellows," said our chief cook, who was always grumbling.

"The only thing worthy of a second thought in all their yarns," said the critic of our party, "is this—how came that fellow Lige to know that Colorado Joe here—a stranger to Denver—had a scar on the cap of his right knee?"

"Um, the fact is," said Joe, "I blushed at the claims of the three Pikes last night when you here thought I was lodged at a hotel in Franktown, at the other end of the lake."

Critic—Ah, I see! So it is to you we are indebted for the visit and peculiar style of entertainment we have been favored with today?

Colorado Joe—Yep!

THE END.

Nature's Several Ally.

If nature did not struggle against disease even in weakly constitutions, swift indeed would be the course of a malady to its fatal termination. While nature thus struggles, let us, lest worse befall us, aid her efforts with judicious medicinal help. Experience makes our guide in battles with disease, and that "lamp to our feet" indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a safe, tried and thoroughly ally of nature. If the blood be infected with bile, if the bowels and stomach are inactive, if the kidneys fail to expel impurities of which they are the natural outlet, a course of the Bitters is the surest reliance of the sufferer, one, moreover, that is sanctioned by professional indorsement and used for nearly half a century. No American or foreign remedy has earned greater distinction as a remedy for and preventive of chronic liver complaint, malaria, constipation, kidney and rheumatic trouble and debility.

Will be given for a better bowel and liver remedy than German Liver Powder. Price 25 cts. per bottle. Call on Williams, Bell & Co. for a sample bottle.

Cholerine in Pennsylvania.

Switchey, Penn., We had an epidemic of cholerine, as our physicians called it, in this place lately and I made a great hit with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarhoea Remedy. I sold four dozen bottles of it in one week and have sold nearly a gross. This Remedy did the work and was a big advertisement for me. Several persons who had been troubled with diarrhœa for two or three weeks were cured by a few doses of this medicine.

Piles or Hemorrhoids.

This uncomfortable disease is the direct result of constipation. The hard matter in the intestines presses upon the veins, and finally engorges them in certain places with blood. Whoever has suffered from piles knows how painful and troublesome they are. To cure them we must abolish the cause, which is constipation. The patient and intelligent use of German Liver Powder will do it. In old and chronic cases some little time may be required, but the good result is sure to follow. Price 25c at Williams Bell & Co.'s drug store.

COLUMBUS AND THE FIFTEENTH CENTURY.

For the HERALD.

One of the finest and most brilliant passages in the Divine comedy of Dante is that which gives a description of his ascent from the circles of gloom and woe to the fifteenth planet, Mars. The East is rosy with the colors of the dawn and the sky "one deep and beautiful serene," He sees no longer faces furrowed with frowns, but faces wearing the smile of saints. Brightness and tears no more lamentations burdening the stained and murky air, but ravishing music, sounding and resounding through the deeps of heaven. The flora undergoes a change, and the immortal bard grows ecstatic gazing on the splendid scenery of the new country. Living for a time in this new and upper clime, vernal with the amaranth and palm, he tells us in the following language:

"My spirit rec'vd, so passing sweet the strain,
And what I saw was equal ecstacy."

This canto came to me with singular force as I thought of the fifteenth century, as the dawn flushed with azure and gold after the long and dripping night of ignorance and superstition. From the fall of the Roman Empire to the beginning of the century which gave Columbus birth, night overshadowed the world with only here and there the twinkle of a star.

The eleventh century opened with a faint promise of the dawn. The Eastern horizon exhibited a rent in the cloud and streaks of gray peered through. This century saw rags made into cotton paper, the origin of the Gothic style of architecture, the normal conquest of Spain, the invention of the musical scale, the birth of scholastic philosophy, the building of Westminster Hall, the victories of the crusades to the Holy land, the reconstruction of the Catholic church by the genius of Hildebrand, and the birth of St. Bernard, the last of the Fathers, to whom the Bible was a solemn and lordly temple, vast, sumptuous, perfumed with incense, along whose pavements and under whose arches walked the holy of the holy, and state which streamed through every window of prophecy or of gospel the splendor of God."

The twelfth century will always be memorable because of the uprising of grand cathedrals and many noted characters, particularly Heloise and Abelard, a man with a soaring and winged intellect, a woman clothed with all the loveliness of love.

In the thirteenth century a great poet is born. He gives new islands and continents to the world of thought, and discovers new constellations in the firmament of mind.

"Paleset of stars, lost in the train of night
If better thou belong not to the dawn,
Sure pledge of day, that crown'st the smiling morn with thy bright circlet."

The fourteenth century gave Wickliffe to the world, and the sky in the East reddened with the coming glory of the dawn, and the hilltops shimmered in the light.

When the fifteenth opened it was no longer night, but morning. It was a new era, the Renaissance, the New Birth of the world. It stands for a great uprising from the dead. Revival in art, revivals in literature and revivals in religion. What a century to produce such majestic intellects as Joan of Arc, Columbus and Bramante, Angelo and Leo X. Luther and Raphael, Savanarola and Erasmus! Joan of Arc saw visions of God and heard voices from the excellent glory telling her what to do. She won many victories and has been called

"The whitest lily on the shield of France
With heart of virgin gold."

Savanarola was a meteoric light that flashed with intense and dazzling glory and went out in blood. In a robe of flame he passed to heaven to swell the martyr throng. But above the fire of faggots he saw supernal visions, his soiled and faded garments change to immortal robes of beauty, the "earnest fold choruns of Hallelujahs and harping symphonies" in the upper air. Leo X., the brilliant son of the great Lorenzo, was a man of refined intellectualism, a devoted lover of arts and sciences, the originator of the sale of indulgences, and the world-renowned cathedral of St. Peter. Erasmus was a man of immense learning. He nursed the tree of literature into richer and brighter flowering and evoked the jewels of fine gold from the vasty deep. We know the past speak.

"From History's scroll the splendor streams;
From science leaps the living ray,
Flashed from the poet's glowing dreams;
The opal fires of fancy play."

Luther seized an old book covered with dust and cobwebs, and as he read it, he was thrilled as under a sacred symphony. It unveiled a new heaven, a new earth. It became to him the Book of Life, the Book of Books, "of history more sublime than Herodotus, more vivid and more solemn, of infinitely more eternal, of eloquence more impassioned, of poetry more divinely enchanting, of a light more supernatural and more full." And with an idea of the Bible, he ushered in the sublime enlightenment of a new spirituality.

Bramante, Angelo and Raphael opened the heaven of classic art and gave ornament and beauty to a macerated world.

The printing press came into existence as the handmaid of science, the foe of ignorance and the friend of freedom. Before the close of this century, more than 8,000 books had been printed. The long imprisoned thoughts of Greek and Roman authors were released, the ancient classics came forth renewed and pulsed with vigorous life, and the land of Virgil became a second Greece. This century, which produced philosophers to broaden the horizon of thought; artists to cover the naked walls of life with angel faces and alluring lineaments; poets to transfigure the lives of working men and to fill their homes with joy and song, and heroes to free the souls and bodies of men, gave birth to Columbus. What a century! Crowded with achievements and with great events, and marked by the discovery of laws and principles—a finding of the past, as well as of the present. Out of this century came the man who connected the New with the Old and reestablished the unity of the human race.

At this time the grand dream of Pythagoras was on its way to fulfillment. This ancient geometer, with the vision of a seer, looked down the vista of the ages and saw science and the immortal bard grows ecstatic gazing on the splendid scenery of the new country. Living for a time in this new and upper clime, vernal with the amaranth and palm, he tells us in the following language:

"My spirit rec'vd, so passing sweet the strain,
And what I saw was equal ecstacy."

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 29.

POSTMASTERS Griffin and Taylor, we salute you.

This is the last week of Circuit Court. The next term commences the 15th of May for a term of two weeks.

GENERAL WADE HAMPTON, of South Carolina, has been appointed Railroad Commissioner by President Cleveland.

IN the trial of R. Y. Thomas, Jr., at Morganfield, for murder, the result was a hung jury. This is the third result of the same kind. It is said the indictment will now be dismissed.

SECRETARY CARLISLE has selected and announced his private secretary. The fortunate man is Col. Sam M. Gaines, of Covington, Ky., an old newspaper man. Mr. Gaines is at present one of the editors of the Kentucky Commonwealth. The position pays a salary of $2,400 a year.

OHIO county is still wholly without representation at the seat of our State Government. Some man who procured Mr. Wesley Crowe to run for the Legislature ought to get him to go back to his job or give up the fat salary the tax-payers are paying him. Mr. Crowe ought to return to Frankfort or he ought to resign.

T. B. WILSON, a well known citizen of Leitchfield, is an applicant for the post-office there. He is an old newspaper man, the best of good fellows and a thorough business man. He has fought long and valiantly for his party in Grayson, and no man shares more largely the confidence of his neighbors. We hope Mr. Wilson may be given the place he wants.

It is probable that this is the last term of court at which we will have three separate juries. Judge Owen has indicated his opinion that one jury could very well serve for the entire time of our present short terms of court without inconvenience and thus save the extra expense and trouble of procuring two or three juries for one term. The change will be a great economy and will no doubt suit all parties.

MANY people object to the present system of taxation in force in Kentucky, and much is said about "double taxation." The truth is that the present revenue law governing the taxation of notes and other evidences of debt, is just, equitable and fair. No man pays "double" taxes. No man pays any taxes on any property save on the property which he has, which is right. Taxes—except poll tax—are levied upon the property of the country, and every species of property should bear its proportionate share.

LONG continuance in public office is unfortunate for him who thus shares public favor. It destroys his self-reliance and unfits him for the activities of competing business life. A public office is of necessity a monopoly, and having enjoyed its benefits for many years together, few men have made active or useful factors in the business world. Too often they come out of a long term of public service sour and ungrateful, mad because the people will not give them more. A public office is in many, if not in most cases a private misfortune.

HUGH ARDLEY, of the Kentucky Republican, is a sensible, honest man. Far too much of both, it would seem, to be trying to run a Republican newspaper in Kentucky. But his paper is popular with everybody, chiefly because he tries to tell the truth as he sees it. A characteristic utterance is the following, which contains a concession which the more narrow-minded of his party members would not make. He says:

Grover Cleveland is President of the United States with all the power that the name implies. He is not the tool of any clique, and if he keeps his good resolutions, he will make as good an executive as any.

THE particular Jones family of which one Samuel is a member, is entirely too fond of notoriety. Some years ago Anna, a daughter of the Jones household, married one William Graham, from whom she was subsequently divorced. The Joneses recently gave a big wedding, to which many guests were invited, the occasion being the re-marriage of the divorced Anna to her ex-husband Graham. It was all well enough for Anna and William to try it again, if they were willing to risk each other for a second venture upon the matrimonial sea, but good taste would have suggested a quiet second launching from dry dock.

THE efforts of different citizens here to secure the post-office has been settled at last by the appointment of Mr. W. H. Griffin to the place. Mr. Griffin is well known to the patrons of the office, having spent nearly all his life here. His appointment, while it will bring disappointment to other good Democrats, will meet with generous approval from the patrons of the office, without regard to whom they may have favored for the place. Mr. Griffin is an energetic, reliable business man, thoroughly sober, honorable and accommodating, and withal is a good Democrat of good old Virginia Democratic stock. We predict that he will make an efficient and popular official.

"WHEN I see our school boys stunting their growth and drying up their brains with smoke; when I discover that their very cigars are soaked in alcohol and liquors, and that the boys are baited with beer and enticed into saloons by music, games and evil company; when I am told of their degeneracy in scholarship, so that the percentage of girls who graduate and who take honors is steadily gaining on that of boys, it seems to me that I cannot wait until the schools of my country focus their splendid light upon the problem of prevention. It is a glorious thing to go to the rescue of wicked and ruined manhood with the life boat of reform, but far more glorious to build a lighthouse on the sunken reef, warning the unskilled voyager of his danger."—Francis Willard.

A. M. CAPPS notifies the citizens of Muhlenberg county that he will be in the county at once for the collection of the taxes so long due by that county on their railroad indebtedness. The people of that unfortunate county have at last reached the end of the tedious litigation which has cost them enough to go far toward defraying this debt which they owe. They have been misguided and hoodwinked by sharpers who wanted office and who pandered to the people's prejudices against paying this debt until the debt has grown to enormous proportions. There never was any doubt about their legal responsibility on the railroad bonds, and now that nothing remains but to pay or resist by armed violence, they ought to make terms with the bondholders and proceed to rid themselves of the tax incubus by paying it.

UNJUST TO THE INNOCENT.

The Republican is having some more spasms about its peculiar view of law and order, and naming a list of acquittals secured at this term of our court by those charged with crime, complains that "justice is cheated of her due," and as usual, arraigns the "civil authorities," against whom it would array a prejudice for what it is pleased to call "aggravated cases" of violence without redress.

The Republican ought, in justice to all, both men who are accused of crime and to the officers of the law, to give a true and full statement of such matters or refrain from assailing indiscriminately the civil authorities whom it seems to blame for the acquittal of the men who it says are guilty of aggravated violation of law.

The cases of which it complains went to a jury after the fullest and fairest inquiry into the alleged wrong-doing and its causes. The Commonwealth gave the strongest possible presentation of her side of the various causes. In Callahan's case—which is made by the Republican's statement a very bad one—he was prosecuted by as able a member as practices at the Hartford bar, in place of the Commonwealth's Attorney who was sick, and yet, after a fair hearing, the jury acquitted him. Young Bob Moseley, of Ashbury, whom the Republican says "stabbed a playmate to death with a knife without any apparent cause save perhaps a boyish quarrel," was the victim of an unfortunate accident which caused the death of a playmate whom he loved and whom all the testimony showed he intended to do no harm. He had a penknife in his hand and in a boyish senilie he by accident struck the leg of young Yau Morgan, an artery was severed and young Morgan died. The father of the boy whom this inquisitor of public morals says "was stabbed to Brown's in an elegant administration, death," appeared at the trial with or whether General Buckner wrote tears of sorrow for the death of his boy and of sympathy for the boy who was the innocent cause of his death. Although vigorously prosecuted, there was nothing in the whole case squinting at wrong on the part of little Bob Moseley, who is only fourteen years old and the son of one of the best families in the county.

People like this boy, who have had a fair trial by a jury—and the jury which tried Moseley was of as good men as live in Ohio county—do not like to be taken up by a newspaper which knows nothing of the facts and branded as criminals and officers of the law and jurymen who do their best to secure justice between man and man, do not like to be assailed by a statement which pretends to give results without giving any of the facts upon which those results depend. If anybody has a grievance, he ought to state facts and not his conclusions from facts about which he knows but little.

THE GAMBLING VICE.

The Messenger complains that the gambling vice has secured a dangerous hold upon the boys of Owensboro.

Little as has been said about it, or perhaps thought about it, the truth is that the insidious and dangerous vice of card-playing has to-day a stronger hold upon Hartford than all other forms of immorality put together. The boys of respectable families spend much of their time at the card table, where money is bet, won and lost, and among many of the young men the vice has grown to be an absorbing passion. It is one of the most degrading of the vices of society, and not even drunkenness will so soon or so effectually destroy a young man's sense of self-respect. The table is supposed to be surrounded by a certain kind of so called "honor," but there be few who participate in these games who will not "rope in" a countryman who is foolish enough to enter the game, get him half drunk and rob him under the guise of winning his money at a table where all have equal chances. It is seldom one of these countrymen is found to complain of this ill treatment—and in truth they deserve little sympathy—but the strange thing is that men laying any claim to respectability will prostitute honor and manhood in pursuit of a vice which as practiced in Hartford, is quite as disreputable as any of its kindred sins and little less criminal than theft.

THE BROWN-BUCKNER CONTROVERSY.

Governor Brown has pleased his friends throughout the State by publishing a dignified reply to ex-Governor Buckner's open letter of some weeks ago. The people of the State are very much attached to General Buckner—they love the high-no honorable man which they all know him to be, and their love for the man has led many of them to side with him in a losing cause. No body outranks the HERALD in an exalted estimate of the spotless private character of General Buckner, but to the candid mind there can be no doubt that Governor Brown has made out a bad case against the Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners of which Governor Buckner was a member. An abusive letter attacking personally the chief executive of the State was a bad kind of a defense for General Buckner to come before the people with. No body supposes for one moment that as Governor or member of the Board of Commissioners, General Buckner could have been influenced to do what he thought wrong, but there were many things done about Frankfort while General Backner was Governor, of which that gallant old man never dreamed, and there can be no doubt but that the Mason-Foard Company stood mighty close to some of the Governor's advisers, and there is a feeling in the minds of the people that in his abusive letter to Governor Brown, General Buckner has failed to controvert the facts alleged by the Governor, which were the only part of the matter in which the people had any interest.

The truth is, John Young Brown is a learned lawyer and a man of most splendid attainments and within at one of the most careful and accurate business men in the State. He has, in the main, sustained his allegations in the matter, and there being no further good to result from a war of words between these two distinguished gentlemen, unless General Buckner has some facts to state relative to the real matter in dispute, which is not whether Governor Brown's administration was "as bad as hell" or whether General Buckner wrote the letter he signed, but simply how much and for what do the losses of the Penitentiary owe the State? Unless General Buckner can throw some new light on this question, then he ought to remain silent.

Meantime, we move for judgment against the Mason-Foard Company for what they owe the tax-payers of Kentucky.

ALL AGAINST SALOONS.

From a copy of the resolutions occurring elsewhere in this paper may be learned the feeling of the College boys, as expressed through their splendid organization, upon the whisky question.

The neighboring newspapers are mistaken about there being any hot fight here upon the question of saloons or no saloons. It is not an open question as to how the feeling of the town is upon the subject. There are enough outspoken anti-saloon men in Hartford to defeat their establishment, and it is not at all probable that anything like a vigorous fight will be undertaken by the saloon people.

Every honorable means will be employed if necessary to defeat the establishment of saloons, and it is practically certain that by far the larger number of our citizens will side with the School, the Churches and those who have boys whom they want spared the terrible temptation of the open saloon.

There is really no sense in forcing a vote upon the question, and those who are managing the matter ought to save their money and time, save the needless agitation of the question and save the ignominious defeat that awaits their unholy purpose at the hands of Hartford's virtuous-loving citizens, by withdrawing the proposition to take the vote.

Hartford wants no saloons, and by the grace of God and by the help of the College, the Churches, the fathers and the mothers of this town, she is not going to have them.

Lives to Eat.

[Kentucklan.]

A Crofton man is reported as having eaten for one meal, of ham eggs, three pounds of crackers, a pound of cheese and drank three glasses of beer. But South Christian takes the cake. There is a gentleman living near Julien who ate a ham of a 100-pound hog, a hard-boiled eggs, two loaves of baker's bread, a dish of sauce and drank a quart of whisky all at one meal. The gentleman is prepared to make affidavit to the above statement at any time. It would likely not be out of place to state, however, that he has not been enjoying the best of health since his overindulgence.

Gold Premiums

The tobacco crop in the United States has reached enormous proportions. The annual production is now worth $40,000,000. It is the money staple of this Green river country, and undoubtedly the most profitable crop, especially for small farmers, when remunerative prices can be obtained. A superior article will always command these prices. The question, then with the farmer is, how to make better tobacco, and more of it on fewer acres. Extensive experiments in this county and many others show that "systematic culture and the use of good fertilizers" is the answer to that question. By these the crops are made earlier, better, and the yield perhaps 50 to 100 per cent. greater.

We are handling the "Homestead Tobacco Grower," which has stood the test of many years, and the competition of other fertilizers, with the most satisfactory results. It is a high grade goods and is certainly our fertilizer for tobacco crops. In order to encourage the growth of this money staple everybody can have a chance at the Gold Premium, and at the same time improve the quality and quantity of their crop. We keep constantly on hand the "Homestead" and sell in large or small quantities. Call on us.

Advice to Travelers.

[Demorest's Family Magazine.]

In traveling, whether by rail or by steamer, a calm manner and entire absence of anxiety and fussiness marks the well-bred woman and experienced traveler. If information or assistance is needed, it is proper to ask it from the uniformed officials, and it will be a very rare instance when a courteous response is not received. Keep cool, and when most perplexed follow Paddy's sage advice: "An' now be easy; an' if ye can't be easy, why be as easy as ye can."

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

IT IS ALL ONE-SIDED—AGAINST THE SALOON.

[McLean County Star.]

An election is to be held in Hartford May 14 to take the sense of the people on the proposition to grant saloon licenses. Hartford has been dry for ten years, and will probably remain so. Both the local newspapers and all the best people of the town are opposed to the saloon, and a hard fight will be made against its re-establishment.

AND A GREAT LEGISLATURE WE HAVE.

[Frankfort Capital.]

The Senate school bill which was pending in that body for a year, is having rough sailing in the House, and when it gets through that body, if it ever should, it will be unrecognizable by its author. There are indications that an amendment will be offered to charge the general expenses of the State to the School Fund. This is a great country we live in.

ABOUT PUBLIC OFFICES.

[Louisville New Era.]

Offices can be regarded as spoils only when they are distributed indiscriminately, partisanship being the test of fitness instead of honesty and efficiency. No honest and competent Democrat should hesitate to apply to Mr. Cleveland for an office, for this is an essentially Democratic administration, and capable, honest and efficient Democrats will be given the preference over Republicans. Office-seekers should not rush to Washington and worry Mr. Cleveland now, but wait awhile until he gets a little more at leisure. He has no time now to look after the distribution of patronage, except a few of the most important positions.

THE GREATNESS.

There is a wide diversity of opinion as to the qualities requisite to make a truly great man. In the following a moral is in the Detroit Free Press comes very close to the line:

"Moral greatness consists not in the office a man fills, or the elevation he has reached by the zeal of his friends. The humblest individual in the neighborhood may in reality be the greatest man in town. He is unknown by the crowd, but in correct principles, moral habits, unbending integrity he shows a grandeur of character which no man in power can boast. His talents and efforts are forming and fixing the principles of multitudes who are not sensible of the influence he has upon them. He works silently, judiciously and constantly. This is moral greatness. Where you find a man leading you along imperceptibly, as by silken cords and silent, resistless appeals, you may be sure he possesses in a pre-eminent degree the elements of real greatness. Such an individual is worth to God and humanity a thousand times as much as the man who is elevated in the glare of selfishness and popular applause—who has been fitted up by the labor of others—but who never raised himself an inch by his courage, his steadfastness, his moral power and virtue."

Luck of Our Whilom Horseman.

[Owensboro Messenger.]

The late Mr. Boyd Crowder, of this city, was known to fame as a very unlucky horse trader. It was said, indeed, that no one was ever known to get the better of him in a transaction of that kind. However, Mr. Jas. A. Steger, a merchant of Princeton, Ky., has a horse which he traded for with Crowder two years ago, which has proved to be a wonder. Crowder came through Princeton with an ernery looking animal with almost no tail at all and otherwise disreputable in appearance. Steger had an old "bag-of-bones" which he swapped for Crowder's nag, giving him $50 to boot. Then Crowder proposed to sell him the horse for which he had traded for $25 cash, which offer Steger declined with thanks. He put the bob-tailed Crowder out on pasture for two or three months and he improved immensely. Soon he learned the "critter" could trot a little. Then he put him in training. In a very short time he could make a mile on a half-mile track in 2:30. Before the season closed he had brought his record down to 2:30. Last year he won a race at Nashville in 2:21, surprising all the turfmen. Mr. Steger had some time before been offered $1,000 for the horse. He now refused to same his value. This season he is entered in a $5,000 trot in Michigan and one in the Chicago trots. The horse is but five years old. Crowder got him from a Mr. South, of Owensboro, who bought him of John Elliott, of Henderson. Elliott raised him from a colt. Mr. Steger some time ago went to Henderson and bought the mother of the horse from Elliott for $150. He was immediately offered $800 for her. Mr. Steger thinks there are great possibilities for his horse on the turf.

Civil Service and the Inaugural.

[Harper's Weekly.]

Even the greediest and most infatuated politician will have to admit that the spirit of civil service reform is vigorously alive when an incoming President pleads in its behalf as powerfully as Mr. Cleveland does in his inaugural address; and the experience of his administration gives double strength to his utterance. "One mode of the misappropriation of public funds is adroitly," says he, "when appointments to office, instead of being the rewards of partisan activity, are awarded to those whose efficiency promises a fair return of work for the compensation paid to them. To secure the fitness and competency of appointees to office, and to remove from political action the demoralizing madness for spoils, civil service reform has found a place in our public policy and laws. The benefits already gained through this instrumentality, and the further usefulness it promises, entitle it to the hearty support and encouragement of all who desire to see our public service well performed, and hope for the elevation of political sentiment and the purification of political methods." Thus he places the practical as well as the moral significance of the matter firmly and clearly before the people, and his party will be judged to have sinned against light if it fails to follow his leadership.

The whole inaugural address forcefully shows a patriotic, wise, conservative, and at the same time progressive policy, and if the Executive acts firmly and vigorously upon the principles there laid down, and is intelligently and faithfully supported by Congress, we risk nothing in predicting that President Cleveland's second administration will be memorable for its beneficent results.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Newport News line has opened up a new route to St. Louis via the Paducah & Cairo Short-line. The length is 231 miles, with a river transfer at Padnesh.

At Lebanon, Ky., Judge Rives, after four mistrials of a lawsuit, challenged the defendant to a wrestling bout to settle the case. He lost in three straight falls.

Jesse O. Wells, of Pulaski county, ill, and Jane Cox, 38, of Whitacy county, were married at London, and then left on foot for the distant home of the groom in Pulaski.

Philip Ran, aged 103 years, five months and twenty-seven days, died at Cannelton, Ind., March 14th. This remarkable character was born on September 14, 1789, in Germany, twenty-five years before the battle of Waterloo and thirteen after the declaration of American Independence. He came with his wife to this country in 1857.

At Kinney, Ky., March 13th Walker Day's large dwelling house, with contents, burned to the ground. But for a small dog that was locked up in the house, the family would have been burned to death. Mrs. Day, hearing the unusual howling and yelping of the dog, got up out of the bed to investigate. When she opened the kitchen door the flames darted in, and in an instant the whole house was enveloped. She had just time to arouse the family and escape.

John M. Allison, a well-known trader of Nicholasville, went to Atlanta, Ga., some weeks ago with a large stock, leaving at home his wife and three children. While there he made love to a rich widow, making her believe he was a single man and very wealthy. Under this assumption he married her. He came home last Thursday and to save him from prosecution he has been arrested on a plea of insanity. There is no doubt that he will be sent to the asylum by the authorities. Crofton Gleaner.

ALPHONSO.

A Temperance Lesson.

[Frankfort Capital.]

The sheriff of Jefferson county yesterday brought to the penitentiary Bert Wing, who will here spend the remainder of his miserable existence for the murder of his wretched wife. It is not the first time he has worn a convict's garb, having killed a man in St. Louis about the woman whose murder closes the doors of his prison for a lifetime. Now is this all. In this same prison he meets a brother, sentenced for murder. What an object lesson these two young men teach. Of gentle parentage, tenderly nurtured, well educated, they put an enemy into their mouths that stole away their brains, and drove their parents into dishonored graves. But for whisky, each of these young men might be an ornament to day to society, instead of disgraced occupants of prison cells. God pity them!

WASHINGTON TOPICS

[Special Correspondence of the HERALD.]

WASHINGTON, March 18, 1893.

The new Democratic administration—the second in more than thirty years—is beginning to manage a good working condition. President Cleveland has, of course, been literally overrun with callers since inauguration day, as has every member of the cabinet, but no complaint is heard, and every one is received courteously. Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland's first week or two at the White House will not be a fair sample of what is going to constitute their domestic routine in their old home. The first days have been largely given over to seeing visitors, of which Mrs. Cleveland has received a due proportion, although they did not come to her presence in as large numbers as they did to the east side of the mansion, where Mr. Cleveland receives his callers. Neither the President nor Mrs. Cleveland has been able to get much out-door exercise as yet, except from driving, and the opportunities for that have been limited. In another week or two things will settle down, and the Clevelands will begin their real White House existence.

A great many people have seen Mrs. Cleveland since she returned, but there is very little difference of opinion as to whether she is as handsome as ever. The most critical observers declare that she never was as pretty as she is now. She has not the color in her cheeks that she had when she first came to Washington as a bride, but the slight pallor makes her face doubly sweet and attractive, and all who saw her at the inaugural ball are unanimous in the opinion that her appearance never before had so truthfully been described as that of a perfectly handsome woman. Mrs. Cleveland will probably in the near future appoint a day when she will be at home to callers, but it is not supposed that these receptions will be for the general public. So far as is now known there will be no public reception at the White House until next winter. The President has had to answer a good many inquiries every day, both at his public receptions in the east room and from the visitors he receives upstairs, about Mrs. Cleveland.

***

Everybody is noticing that Mr. Cleveland takes more genially to meeting the crowd than he did when President before. He is receiving all callers as far as possible, and shows a disposition to give courteous attention to all requests and recommendations, but he is as diplomatic as ever and as cautious about making promises. His announcement that he will not receive his old appointees to office except in cases of unusual and extraordinary merit caused disappointment and some remonstrance among that class at first, but the conviction is growing that the decision is good policy. It opens the doors to many faithful Democratic workers who were unrewarded during the last Democratic administration and insures a fairer distribution of party favors. Naturally but few appointments have been made as yet, as the changes must be arranged carefully. The matter of first importance will doubtless be the selection of the assistant secretaries in the various government departments here and the choosing of those who will be sent abroad in important positions. The only important appointments of this class thus far announced are those of Josiah Quincy, of Massachusetts, as First Assistant Secretary of State; Robert A. Maxwell, of New York, as Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, and ex-Governor Isaac P. Gray, of Indiana, as Minister to Mexico, and Patrick A. Collins, of Massachusetts, as Consul General to London. The duties of Mr. Maxwell's position are the same as were those of the First Assistant Postmaster General when Vice-President Stevenson occupied the latter office, the fourth-class postmasters having since been placed under control of the Fourth Assistant. It is said that Mr. Maxwell has already announced that he is in favor of removing Republican postmasters as fast as their commissions expire, and if this is true it bodes no good to Republican appointees who are looking for favors from this administration.

***

One of President Cleveland's first official acts was to recall from the Senate the treaty for the annexation of Hawaii which Mr. Harrison had transmitted near the close of the regular session of Congress. It has developed that the treaty was withdrawn from further present consideration in order that the administration may make a thorough investigation of the subject before it commits itself for or against annexation or any other radical plan of action. It is said that Mr. Cleveland is not altogether satisfied with either the quantity or quality of the information in regard to the matter now at his command, and that he has concluded to send a special commission to the Hawaiian Islands to investigate the existing order of affairs and to ascertain the sentiment of all the people on the subject of annexation. The composition of this commission will probably be determined in a few days, as it is desired to have them visit the islands as soon as possible. Mr. Cleveland's conservative course in this matter is generally commended, as the outgoing administration, it is felt, was acting with precipitate haste about it.

***

The Democrats have happily secured control of the Senate as well as the House, but unless there is a change in Senatorial sentiment three States—Montana, Washington, and Wyoming—will have but one representative each in the upper branch of Congress for some time to come, a condition of affairs for which the legislatures of those States are alone responsible, they having adjourned without filling the vacancies. The Governors of the three States have made appointments to fill the vacancies thus left, but it seems almost certain that the appointees will not be permitted to take the seats.

McHENRY, KY.

March 20, 1893. Miss Effie Taylor returned home last week, accompanied by Mrs. C. W. Taylor and children, who will spend a week or two in the country.

Mr. C. W. Taylor looked rather lonesome Sunday, but was cheered up and enlivened some by the notice of his appointment as postmaster at this place. No doubt he will make a good officer and see that mail matter is properly and promptly attended to.

Miss Minnie Blankenship, of Beaver Dam, was in town last week. She was the guest of Miss Mandie Dumas.

Mr. R. M. Hicks, who disappeared very mysteriously sometime since, returned to his family last Wednesday. Suppose he realizes that there is no place like home.

Mr. Wm. Taylor and father arrived from Scotland last Wednesday. They were about seventeen days crossing the mighty waters, and on account of delay had to live on half rations several days before getting into harbor. Young Mr. Taylor is not a very windy man, but understands the art of filling horns and transposing scales, so will take the leadership of our colored cornet band. They were out Saturday night filling the air with sweet and melodious sounds.

Miss Emma Barnes was called to Beaver Dam on business one day last week. Think Uncle Sam or some other Uncle wanted to confer with her.

Mr. L. Stewart was on the sick list last week and went home to recuperate. He returned Sunday and is now behind the counter serving in his former capacity.

Miss Blanche Kelly left for Louisville last Friday, where she will spend a few months taking lessons in dressmaking. Miss Blanche is a handsome young lady and no doubt will make some city milliner as well as dresses.

Mrs. Mary Hall and daughter left Sunday for Spottsville, Ky., where they will join Mr. Hall and son and will make their future home in that town. This family have been residents of our town for a number of years, and their absence leaves many friends who regret their departure.

Born, on the 12th inst., to Mrs. Frank Tall, a tall little son.

Mrs. A. Duncan is still on the sick list and not as well to-day as she has been for the last few days. BIX.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for April.

The "Art Aspects of the World's Fair," as set forth by Isabel McDougall in the leading illustrated article in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for April, makes a beautiful and impressive showing of the wonderful White City at Chicago. Two other articles in this number especially noteworthy from a pictorial point of view, in addition to their literary interest, are Dr. Depoff's "Russian Folk Songs" and Charlotte Conrson's "Bavarian Highlands." "From Adze to Palace" is a study in Lenten lore, with some curious illustrations of Paschal customs in Europe. Other attractive illustrated papers are: "Birds in Flocks," by Nelly Hart Woodworth; "A Celestial Farm on Long Island," by Dot Seitz; "The Symbolism of Lines," by J. Carter Beard; and ex-Mayor Oakey Hall's reminiscences of "The New York Fancy Ramble." A second installment of Ellis W. Pierce's new serial story, "Jack o' the Light," is given, together with short tales and sketches by David Ker, Katherine Sinclaird, Charles H. Crandall, Serena Townsend, Mary A. Denison, Elenor Waddle, and others.

Pushing Things at Deanefield.

[Owensboro Messenger.]

Mr. D. Stewart Miller, of Deanefield, was in the city yesterday getting material for the new mine building at that place. While here he went to Baskett to inspect the works there with a view of getting pointers for his work. The mines will be in operation in about two weeks. The city miners who were thrown out of work by the recent fire are still at Deanefield waiting for the resumption of operations. The mines will be run on a larger scale than ever when they are re-opened. Mr. Miller is pushing things right along, so as to get ready as soon as possible.

PERSONAL.

Dr. J. H. White is in Louisville.

L. A. Maiden, Utica, Daviess county, is in town.

Mr. Wm. Lyons returned from Illinois last Wednesday.

Col. J. H. McHenry, Owensboro, is the guest of Hon. J. J. McHenry.

Misses Lula and Electra Carson are visiting the family of Wilson Bennett, in Daviess county.

Mrs. E. D. Gaffy and daughter Mercides returned Sunday from an extended visit to Louisville and Rosine.

Mr. Robert Vaught, after a pleasant visit to relatives here, returned to his home in Burnt Prairie, Ill., last Friday.

Judge W. N. Sweeney, Owensboro, and attorney John Gates, Louisville, were in attendance at court the first of the week.

D. S. Duncan and C. W. Taylor, McHenry, and W. G. Duncan, Louisville, were the guests of F. L. Felix and family yesterday.

Mr. J. H. B. Carson, of the popular firm of Carson & Co., made a flying trip to Louisville and Cincinnati last week, returning Saturday.

A number of our friends too numerous to mention, called to see us this week and remembered us substantially, for all of which we are profoundly thankful.

Miss Sarah Collins, the popular milliner of the firm of Carson & Co., went to Cincinnati last week. She was accompanied as far as Louisville by Misses Bessie Morton and Sallie Coleman.

The many patrons of the firm of Fair Bros. & Co. will be pleased to know that Miss Helen Foster is to have charge of their millinery department again this season. Miss Foster arrived Sunday.

Mr. William Phipps, of Louisville, passed by Beaver Dam last night for Harrisburg, Ark., where he goes to make a big land deal. He was joined at Beaver Dam by Mr. J. C. Riley, of Hartford, who will accompany him there and more than likely join him in the deal.

The R. E. C. Entertainment.

The R. E. C. Society will entertain at College Hall next Friday evening, the 24th inst., with a choice selection of readings and recitations, interspersed with instrumental and vocal music. Great care and zeal in preparation have been exercised by the young ladies and the occasion will abound in bright literary gems.

Com'th vs. Wes Callahan (four cases)—demurrer sustained in two—trial in one and acquitted. A plea of guilty entered in the other and a fine of $50 adjudged.

Com'th vs. H. P. Watts—acquitted.

Com'th vs. Robert Moseley—acquitted.

Com'th vs. D. G. Gammons—grand jury failed to indict and the case stricken from the docket.

Petit jury for this week: Weaver Hocker, G. T. Tinsley, R. V. Wells, J. R. Taylor, J. W. Taylor, Samuel Crowe, Weaver Barnes, Robert Render, N. B. Falkerson, A. T. Brown, W. D. Barnard, C. W. Phillips, F. M. Petty, E. Hedden, J. J. Bracken, W. B. Render, Wayne Paxton, Geo. Baltzell, Hulbert Shultz, J. H. Knykendall, Perry Brown, Eugene Maddox.

The grand jury had adjourned last Thursday after a ten day's session, did some very efficient work. The result of which is, fifty-seven indictments, classified as follows:

Disturbing religious worship—two. Assault—one. Malicious wounding—six. Gaming—five. Criminal conspiracy—one. Creating a nuisance—one. Murder—one. Forgery—one. False swearing—one. Wounding in sudden heat and passion—one. Unlawfully setting fire to grass—one. Carrying concealed, on or about the person a deadly weapon—three. Fornication—four. Unlawfully selling spirituous, vinous and malt liquors—twenty-eight. Unlawfully but not feloniously taking and carrying away property of another—one.

The report of the grand jury on the county jail and other public buildings, &c., March 6th, 1893, is as follows:

"We, the grand jury of Ohio county, having visited the jail and the other public buildings, find them in reasonably good condition and well kept. We suggest that the fence around the court house square is in a very dilapidated condition, and should be attended to as early as possible.

"W. I. ROWE, Foreman."

Auction Sale of Town Lots.

I will sell at public auction in Beaver Dam, Ky., Saturday, April 1st, at 2 p. m. 3 town lots, including 1 tobacco barn. This sale was advertised for March 4th, but postponed on account of bad weather. E. G. AUSTIN.

Shall We Have the Open Saloon?

Ought there to be any hesitation in the determination of this question? Should we not the rather with one accord rally to the polls on the 2nd day of May next, and set our unqualified disapproval upon the proposition to license the saloon in our midst, which will be a constant menace to good society? This earnest protest of every good wife in the town and surrounding country is entered against the re-opening of the greatest curse that ever befell any community. The pleading face of many a little child, helpless in childish innocency, looks on with the most intense interest and says: "Do not put this thing on us; for the sake of getting your drink easily, do not open this great temptation before my father, who is so weak that he cannot resist." The people have said that the county shall be under the restraint of the spec. prohibitory law through the county. Hartford then not part of the county? It happens to be within the limits of the county and is subject to the same restrictions as the other portions of the county, and anything done within the corporate limits is as deleterious to the county as in the town, if deleterious at all. To be rid of the annoyance of open saloons where their boys engaged in dissipation, the fathers of the boys of the county said: "There shall be no saloons in the county," certainly not in the county-seat.

If the saloon is a good and a needed blessing, then let the whole county be opened to them and not only a part of the territory.

If a good thing, we are estopped from monopolizing it, and if on the contrary it is bad, we are equally forbidden to bring it upon that portion of the county outside the limits of Hartford, for they will be as much affected by it as those living in the town itself. If we open saloons in the town and not elsewhere in the county, those who drink to excess will certainly flock to town and do their drinking and then go to the country to be drunk, annoying the people along the road to and from the town with their only praiseworthy, obscenity, claiming personal liberty in a free country as their only excuse.

I heard a man say the other day that there is more whisky sold in Hartford now than when we had open saloons, and in the next breath said that he had tried in vain to get a bottle filled for medical purposes. Both were intended to be arguments of indisputable force in favor of saloons.

Verily they are driven to dernier resorts in order to sustain their side of the case. But vain is it to tell people of sense that there are no trouble and heart-burnings to follow the open saloon traffic in ardent spirits, for long experience has taught them differently.

A man who is patronizing our College and who does not live in the town said the other day that he would remove his patronage as soon as saloons are opened in the town. How can we say that there are not many others who would do the same thing? Will the saloon tax pay for this?

What will you do about it? Let us hear from you at the polls in such tones as will forever settle the question in favor of good morals.

Postmasters.

A dispatch was received Sunday from Hon. A. B. Montgomery announcing the appointment of C. W. Taylor for postmaster at McHenry and W. H. Griffin at Hartford. These are both elegant gentlemen, endowed with thorough business education and habits. These appointment are gladly received by all parties at these places, notwithstanding there were several popular applicants at both places. It is not known where the postoffice at this place will be kept.

For Consul to Cuba.

The Messenger says that "an applicant for a place in the diplomatic service who has not yet been mentioned is Dr. J. S. Coleman, of Hartford, who asks to be made Consul General at Havana. This is the place which Judge W. B. Hoke, of Louisville, is after."

The Dr. Coleman mentioned is a Baptist preacher at Hartford, and a man of strong personal qualities and tremendous personal influence in several of the Green river counties.—[Courier-Journal.

Representative Montgomery is making a vigorous fight for Rev. J. S. Coleman, of Hartford, who has filed an application for United States consul to Havana. Mr. Coleman is not here, however, but remains peacefully at home attending to business, although prepared for appointment lightning to strike him at any moment.—[Louisville Times.

While writing with all the scientific knowledge of a great astronomer, Camille Flammarion in his marvelous story "OMEGA: The End of the World," which begins in the April number of THE COSMOPOLITAN magazine, keeps the reader at the highest point of excitement by his vivid description of the alarm and despair excited by the approach of a comet whose collision with the earth had been declared by astronomers inevitable. The description begins at a time when the business of the world has been suspended, and at a great mass-meeting held in the Institute of France, we hear the discussion of scientists as to the possibility of a second deluge, the drying up of all the surface water of the globe, or total destruction of human life by cold, together with all the possible phases of death published by the history of the moon. For scientific statement and sensational effect this characteristic production of French genius is unique, and the reader who reads this marvellous story—and if he begins it he will certainly finish it—will have assimilated without effort, a compact store of scientific knowledge. In this way, apart from its absorbing interest, this remarkable piece of fiction will have a distinct scientific value.

Spring cleaning is in order just now. Before long you will see houses and fences with a new coat of whitewash, yards full of household fixtures, while the mop and broom will be doing some excellent work inside. On a back fence will be seen carpets and near by several worn-out switches, to denote that there has been exercise for some one. Let the good work begin soon.

I understand that some of the members of the R. E. C. (rather eat cream) Society are somewhat agitated over the little notice I gave of their coming entertainment last week. Now, girls, don't take on so. I really didn't intend to expose one of the "terrible secrets" of your Society, but when a little bird flew in at my window and whispered it to me, I felt like you girls generally feel under like circumstances—that I ought to tell it to somebody.

It seems as though a great many people have come to the conclusion that the world will come to an end before long and are not trying very hard to earn a good living or "lay up for a rainy day." It must be that they are afraid they will leave a dollar for someone after they are gone. We have heard of men who have been unfortunate in the loss of a wife, marrying again and some of them twice, who have never yet paid for their first wife's burial expenses. A man that won't keep a dollar ahead, but is always depending on some one else to help him in cases of this kind should not have a place among decent people. We know some men are unfortunate—that is, they try to make an honest living and save a little money but fail. To such we extend our sympathy. But for those who can work and won't work—well—they should be made to work.

An Expression.

WHEREAS, An order has been made by the Ohio County Court for the purpose of taking the vote of the citizens in the corporate limits of the town of Hartford, Ky., as to whether intoxicating liquors shall be sold in said town; we, the members of the Adelphian Literary Society of Hartford College, in meeting assembled, do most earnestly, humbly and respectfully submit the following to all those concerned in this matter:

RESOLVED, That we, members of the Adelphian Literary Society and students of the College, love and cherish our Institution of learning, which is doing so much for the moral and intellectual culture and cultivation of young men and women throughout the country, and that many of us desire to continue our studies in said Institution, believing that every opportunity is afforded here now for the most extensive development of manhood and womanhood,

RESOLVED, That we most humbly and respectfully beg of the good people of Hartford that they use all honorable means to protect the young from every influence that tends to destroy virtue, to paralyze manhood and render happy homes miserable.

RESOLVED, That we fail to see one single benefit that would accrue to the people of Hartford from the sale of liquor.

RESOLVED, That we ask this in behalf of the fair name of Hartford, our College, virtue and in the name of our God.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 22.

HERE ARE THE RULES.

HOW APPLICANTS FOR OFFICE WILL BE CONSIDERED.

They Will be Retained Until Their Commissions Expire or Until They Have Served a Term of Four Years.

[Cincinnati Tribune]

From direct statements by President Cleveland, Postmaster-General Bissell and other members of the Cabinet, made during the week to visiting Congressmen, the following code of rules can now be given as those which will govern all appointments to the public service under this Administration:

1. Incumbents will be retained in office until their commissions expire, unless there is voluntary resignation. When there is no commission fixing tenure, the efficient incumbent will be permitted to serve for four years from time of appointment.

2. No one who held office under the former Cleveland Administration will be again appointed to office, the only exceptions being Railway Mail Clerks and Postoffice Inspectors.

3. No appointments will be made in States having spring State elections until after such elections have occurred.

4. All Postmasters must divorce themselves from private business, excepting instances where, in the fourth class, the pay is so small that Postmasters will not give undivided time to the postoffice.

5. Appointments will not be made upon mandate of petitions or indorsements alone, but the character, appearance and evident fitness of the applicant for the place must also be considered.

6. As appointments are of an executive and not of a political character, recommendations by primary election will not prevail.

7. No exception will be made to rule 2 in favor of applicants who were removed from office by the last Administration before they had served the full term of four years, no matter how brief their services may have been.

Rule 1 does not apply to foreign missions, to the higher grades of Consuls and to Assistant Secretaries and Chiefs of Bureaus. It is intended, however, to cover that vast class of patronage included in the Postoffice, Internal Revenue and Customs services.

Rule 2 is flexible and will be made to cover appointees under the first Cleveland Administration who are still in positions outside of the classified service. The very first appointment made by this Administration was an exception to this rule. This was the removal of the colored messenger at the door of the President's Private Secretary, and the reappointment of the man who was there when Mr. Lamont was Private Secretary. This, however, is insignificant.

Rule 3 is designed to postpone the contentions for office until after full attention has been given to the spring elections. It is felt that bitterness may be engendered among defeated candidates and their friends, which may bring about apathy at the time of the elections. For this reason all candidates are expected to pay their first attention to the elections, and after that to the offices.

Rule 6 is intended to discourage the practice of many Congressmen who think primary elections in order to avoid the personal responsibility of recommending one of several candidates.

When the spring time comes and you feel tired, lazy, and generally no account, don't blame the weather, but cleanse your blood with Plantation Sarsaparilla, and start your liver with Plantation Pills, and begin life anew with the rest of nature. Sold by Williams, Bell & Co.

Penny-in-the-Slot.

Electricity

The last application of the penny-in-the-slot principle is characterized by common sense, ingenuity, and utility. Hitherto the public has fed the automatic machine with pennies in return for value. In the latest plan the process has been reversed. The public will receive pennies instead of giving them. The idea is this: To the person who turns a crank 100 times, the machine yields up one penny. The crank is connected inside with a dynamo, and the 100 revolutions of the humble manufacture and store a quantity of electrical energy, which is to be eventually retailed by the owners of the machine for the purpose of producing illumination.

The plan appears to be feasible enough, and it would certainly, in districts where unemployed labor abounded, be productive of considerable good. No man need go in want of a meal who can supply himself with the electrical automatic machine. And the invention might be capable of wide application. Why should not every household be provided with one? Every member of the family might, in the name of exercise, give the handle so many hundred turns a day sufficient, if that were possible, to provide electricity enough for the purposes of lighting. The turning of the crank might supersede a grand skirt to see so many serving the Lord at once! All the leading business houses could be closed on that day in Nashville. I visited the Vanderbilt University. The grounds are beautiful, covering an area of seventy-five acres. The nice shade trees of pine week by a reasonable expenditure of effort. Even if only a hundred revolutions could be performed in five minutes, the operator would be receiving at the rate of 12 cents an hour—a scale of remuneration much in excess of that paid in some industries involving quite as much physical exercise.

Lincoln and the Office-Seeker.

[Philadelphia Press]

It is well known that Mr. Cleveland has been for a year or two a student in his own manner of the career of Lincoln and he is fond of hearing anything which illustrates Lincoln's method. Therefore it was with keen pleasure that the following anecdote, which I believe is apropos, was first listened to by him. He had been discussing the offices and the clamor of office-seekers, when a gentleman said to him: "Mr. Cleveland, I will tell you a story about Mr. Lincoln and an office-seeker which may contain a hint. In 1863 after the fall of Vicksburg, a man came to Mr. Lincoln seeking an office. He had known Mr. Lincoln very well in the early fifties, but had drifted South. He claimed to have been always a Whig and a Union man, although compelled to hide his sentiment until Vicksburg fell. He wanted an office and a good one, and he was very importunate.

"At last, Mr. Lincoln said to him: 'John, when I was a young man, about the time I first went to Springfield to live, I was invited to a dance, and I was very proud of the invitation. I remember that I bought a new hat, and a very good one, for it cost me more than any other hat I had ever bought, and I was very proud to wear it to the dance. Well, I enjoyed myself so much at this hop that I stayed very late, about the last one to leave if I remember, and when I was ready to go, I said to the colored man who had charge of the coats and hats: 'Now, John, I wish you would bring me my hat.' He brought me a hat that had been worn a long time and was very much out of shape, and I said to him: 'This isn't my hat; I wore a new one,' and then he replied: 'Mr. Lincoln, the new ones were all gone two hours ago.'

"The office-seeker did not catch the hint for a moment or two, but when he did he burst out laughing and said that he had forgotten that it was two years since Mr. Lincoln had any offices to give. He went away and Mr. Lincoln never saw him again."

Mr. Cleveland laughed heartily at this story and seemed to be greatly impressed with the fact shown by Mr. Lincoln in thus dealing with a persistent office-seeker.

The January number of the Mother's Nursery Guide contains an article on the care of the child's scalp and hair, by Dr. A. T. Jackson, in which great stress is laid on the importance of giving early attention to this matter. "Some Common Speech Defects in Children" are treated by Dr. J. Collins, and Dr. E. S. Brown discusses the question whether we can forecast the mental and bodily faculties of a child. Equally instructive are the other departments of the Nursery Guide—"Baby's Wardrobe," the "Kindergarten-at-Home Stories" and the "Nursery Problems," in which the medical editor gives advice as to "possible Causes of a Rash," "Dancing Lessons," "A Digestive Dilemma," etc. The mothers themselves contribute interesting letters to the "Parlament." $2.00 a year, single copies free on application to the Bayhom Publishing Co., 5 Beekman St., New York.

A Trip to Nashville.

CENTERTOWN, KY., March 13, 1893.

Hoping it will be of some interest to the many readers of the HERALD, I will write something about my visit to Nashville, Tenn. I was at the Tabernacle on Washington's birthday and there were 12,000 people present. The Rev. Mills preached an excellent sermon. He asked all that had professed religion before they were twenty, to raise to their feet, and 3,000 responded. What a grand sight to see so many serving the Lord at once! All the leading business houses were closed on that day in Nashville. I visited the Vanderbilt University. The grounds are beautiful, covering an area of seventy-five acres. The nice shade trees of pine and of oak make it lovely. There are several grand buildings on the grounds. I advise all young men to go to the University, as it was built for them. I also visited the grave of James K. Polk and read the verse on his tombstone. He is buried in the front yard of his residence. I was at the Capitol and saw the monuments of Morgan and Williamson. They were called in the wall for they were the planners of the Capitol. The Salvation Army! What a strange way of serving the Lord—blowing horns and beating tambourines and calling Commissioners captains and lieutenants, but they seem to enjoy their religion so much. I was in Nashville six weeks and I enjoyed the visit very much.

Female Weakness Positive Cure

TO THE EDITOR: Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the thousand and one ills which arise from deranged female organs. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any lady if they will send their Express and P. O. address. Yours respectfully, Dr. B. D. Mansfield, Utica, N. Y. 11 4t

Valuable Receipts.

How to get rid of a rusty screw: Apply a redhot iron to the head for a short time, the screwdriver being applied while the screw is hot.

How to preserve eggs: Add 2 pints of slacked lime and a pint of salt to a pail-ful of water. Pickle your eggs in this fluid, and they will keep for a year.

How to kill the nerve of a hollow tooth: Take half a dram of white oxide of arsenic, a dram of sulphate of morphia, mix with a little creosote and apply to the cavity.

How to start a balky horse: Take the horse out of the shafts and make him go round in a circle until he is dizzy. It is a sure means of accomplishing your purpose.

How to color dress goods red: Take an ounce of cochineal, an ounce of muriate of tin and a little cream of tartar dissolved in water enough to cover them. Boil the goods in this preparation for 10 minutes.

HARPER'S WEEKLY.
ILLUSTRATED.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is acknowledged as standing first among illustrated weekly periodicals in America. It occupies a place between that of the literary daily paper and that of the less timely monthly magazine. It includes both literature and news, and presents with equal force and fidelity the real events of current history and the imaginative themes of fiction. On account of its very complete series of illustrations of the World's Fair, it will be not only the guide to the great Exposition, but also its best souvenir. Every public event of general interest will find its place in HARPER'S WEEKLY. The contributions belong from the best writers and artists in this country, it will continue to excel in literature, news and illustrations, all other publications of its class.

WE TELL YOU

nothing new when we state that it pays to engage in business, and to utilize and present less, and returns a profit for every day's work. Such is the case with us—we offer the working class a chance to make money rapidly, and we know we can show those who follow our instructions faithfully the making of $500 to $1000 a month. Every one who takes hold of the work we will surely and speedily increase their earnings; that can be proved beyond a doubt; others are doing it, and you, reader, can do the same. This is the best paying business that you have ever had the chance to secure. You will make money every hour you work; we give a profit for all your work; will often repay a week's work. Whether you are old or young, man or woman, makes no difference,—do as we tell you, and you will make money in your spare time. No experience or capital necessary. Those who start for us are made rich. Why not write to us? In full particulars, free? E. C. ALLEN & CO., Box No 420, Augusta, Me.

THE CELEBRATED STALLION,

TOM NICHOLS,

Will stand the present season, commencing March 27, 1893, at Hartford, on Monday, at Beaver Dam, on Tuesday and Thursday, and at my stables, 2 miles west of Hartford, on the Livermore and Hartford road, on Friday and Saturday of each week.

He will be permitted to serve mares at home at $10 for the season, $15 to insure for the season, or $10 for single leap. Money due when the foal is ascertained, mare transferred or service rendered.

DESCRIPTION.

Tom Nichols is a beautiful iron-gray, dark mane and tail, 16½ hands high, 7 years old, well muscled, stands and walks and carries himself well. He is very docile and works well anywhere.

PEDIGREE.

Tom Nichols was sired by Ten Broeck, he by imported Plaston and he by the great King Tom. Ten Broeck's dam, Fanny Holton, by Lexington, and out of Nantura. Tom Nichols' 1st dam, Artillia, was by Longfellow; 2d dam, Fanny Wells, by imported Sweetlet; 3d dam, Red, by imported Glencoe. Red was the dam of War Dance.

Care taken to prevent accidents, but will not be responsible should any occur.

A. R. PIRTLE, Helling, Ky.
